

Let me tell you a story...

PART I

DECEMBER 28TH, 2025

It was a Sunday morning — the kind that comes wrapped in the leftover joy of Christmas and the quiet anticipation of a new year. The air felt light, forgiving, unhurried. I had slept through most of the previous day, and without the slightest resistance, I allowed that sleep to stretch well into the morning.

Reluctantly, I opened my eyes and began the familiar routine of scanning blindly with my eyes and one hand for my phone. A ritual, really, one this “woke generation” has unconsciously turned into second nature. I eventually found it, almost slipping off the edge of the bed. I had to nudge it closer with my right leg; you know the classic lazy Nigerian youth behaviour, compounded by my lifelong refusal to be a morning person.

Once the phone was in my hand, instinct took over. I opened WhatsApp. I read a few messages (without replying to any). Then, without thinking, I moved straight to the Status page. I bet you could have guessed that.

But the first status I opened did something unexpected...

It jolted me awake; not physically, but mentally. Almost instantly, my senses sharpened, and before I could over-think it, I was typing long paragraphs, pulling words straight from somewhere deep within my subconscious.

The status was a captioned video from a fashion design guru. She was casually explaining how grateful she felt for making a last-minute decision to abandon her original concept for her graduating students’ red-carpet ceremony and her annual Fashion Expo.

Her reason?

An idea she believed was uniquely hers fresh from the depths of her creative mind had suddenly appeared on the social media pages of other fashion designers. An idea she thought was private, personal, almost sacred, was already being implemented, tested, and displayed elsewhere.

Instead of feeling defeated, this fashion design guru felt grateful. She was grateful that this forced her to dig deeper, to stretch further, and to create something even more original.

That caption struck something in me.

It compelled me to reply... not casually, but deliberately. I found myself explaining what I believe to be the reason her “fresh” idea already existed beyond her imagination.

That morning, my perspective crystallized into a single thought:

For every idea you have, you must believe that the rest of the universe is capable of having that same idea. It is the law of Divine Oneness.

“WE ARE HIRING, JOIN OUR TEAM”

The Law of Divine Oneness is regarded by some scholars as the first law of the universe. At its core, it emphasizes the interconnectedness of all things. It teaches that beyond what our senses can perceive; every thought, every action, and every event is linked, each influencing and being influenced by something else.

Simply put, everything that exists, seen and unseen, is connected. Nothing stands alone. All things are woven into an indivisible field of divine oneness.

A striking illustration of this law revealed itself barely a week after my initial encounter with the fashion design guru when I came across another post on her status; a flyer for recruitment.

The job advertisement poster has its role and qualifications for hire aligned with me. It spoke directly to my values, resonated with my skills, and seemed to mirror my inner convictions.

And in that moment, this story was birthed.

COINCIDENCE OR UNIVERSE ALIGNMENT?

Nikola Tesla once said, “If you want to find the secrets of the universe, think in terms of energy, frequency, and vibration.”

Everything that exists, every creature, every inanimate object, every thought, feeling, and desire, possesses its own unique vibration. This means that every particle in the universe is in constant motion, continuously emitting and responding to energy.

Reflecting on my first encounter with the fashion design guru, I believe it’s safe to say that our energies were vibrating at the same frequency. Her post stirred something within me, compelling me to respond from a place of knowledge and conviction.

In turn, she resonated with that response by acknowledging my perspective while also going a step further by reposting my message, and adding a thoughtful comment about how it had shifted something powerful within her thought system.

Like is drawn unto like; we don’t attract what we want, we attract what we are.

“As above, so below; as within, so without” is one of the mantras of life I’ve lived by. It serves as a constant reminder to me that what takes place within my thinking patterns, beliefs, and emotional states; directly corresponds to my perception, experience and interpretation in the external, physical world.

Now, it feels less like coincidence and more like alignment.

THE TOP FIVE LAWS OF THE UNIVERSE

The Law of Divine Oneness affirms that we are all connected and something, whatever it is, unites us all. Our thoughts and actions affect everyone!

The Law of Vibration elaborates the specific energy frequency; nothing will stop because everything is always pushed or pulled towards something. We get what we vibe not what we ask!

The Law of Attraction clarifies that vibrations of the same frequency attract each other; we are magnets, and our experience is the embodiment of the energy we release consciously or unconsciously. Good vibes only!

The Law of Correspondence ascertains that our lives are created by the subconscious patterns that we repeat every day, which either serve us or stop us. It happened for you, not to you!

The Law of Action commands that manifestation requires aligned actions. Desires are brought to us via thoughts, and we receive them by deciding to take action. We must actively pursue our goals!

LET’S WRAP IT UP!

All protocols duly observed, standing on the premise of ‘Laws of The Universe’ which has substantially aligned coincidences with values, skills, purpose, experience and professionalism. PART II

WHO AM I TO WRITE THIS?

“Normality is a paved road; it’s comfortable to walk on, but no flowers grow on it.” — Vincent van Gogh

Life, I believe, is better a little deranged. My goal has never been to be normal, but to be deranged with knowledge. It is far more entertaining and far more meaningful.

Albert Einstein once said, “I have no special talents. I am only passionately curious.” That curiosity defines me. I am, at my core, an inquisitive mind. Reading and writing across a wide range of subjects have been my strength from an early stage of life, forming the very foundation of my values.

I often say my writing journey began on WhatsApp, through short, humorous stories shared as status updates. Those small expressions earned recognition among my peers during secondary school and revealed something important to me: words could connect, influence, and inspire.

That encouragement led me, in 2018, to create a Facebook page called Decousinsseries, now known as De Kompany. It became a space for entertaining and thought-provoking write-ups across diverse topics, alongside witty meme captions. Within a short time, the page grew to nearly 1,000 followers.

A year later, I expanded further by launching a poetry blog on WordPress titled “Arts in Thoughts, Thoughts in Rhymes.” There, I published raw, inspirational poems, pieces written to speak directly to the soul. This continued for several years until academic demands called me into a new phase. (<https://decousinsseries.wordpress.com>)

University life brought experiences that shaped me profoundly. I earned a BSc degree in Human Anatomy from a private university in Kwara State, qualifying as a trained and certified basic medical science practitioner. Science refined my thinking; writing preserved my humanity.

My early professional experience as a writer began in Online Journalism with Civic Torch Magazine, an affiliate of the World Institute for Peace, in 2018. There, I served as a writer, editor, and social media content manager—roles that sharpened my ability to communicate with clarity, structure, and impact.

Throughout this journey, one principle has guided me, it is Knowledge is leverage, Information is power.

This philosophy helped me harness my Mediator (INFP) personality to its fullest. Defined by introversion, intuition, feeling, and prospecting, this rare personality type is known for creativity, empathy, and depth of thought. Mediators are naturally drawn to purpose and meaning, constantly imagining stories, ideas, and possibilities fuelled for authentic self-expression.

This is who I am.

A personality wired for insight, creativity, and care, qualities I believe ensure exceptional and impactful service to any team I work with.

Today, I am also the CEO of De Kompany, a consulting firm rooted in both the academic and business worlds. Established a year ago, De Kompany is built for a generation that values clarity, intelligence, and originality.

We are architects of intelligent outcomes, driven by a vision to become Africa's leading force in idea development, academic excellence, and business innovation. Our mission is simple yet powerful: to transform ideas into structured, strategic, and innovative solutions that empower individuals and organizations to achieve more.

Over the past year, we have made our mark in academia by offering personalized academic writing support and career development consultation, particularly for university undergraduates in their final years. We provide not just services, but companionship by guiding students toward academic excellence with intention and strategy.

Currently, De Kompany is in its pre-launch stage, with a rich archive of writing projects and businesses strategic narratives poised for release. At the same time, we are nearing completion of our website, designed to reflect modern trends and to create meaningful connections between people and businesses.

This is not just what I do.

This is what I am building.

My name is Damilare, Itunu Olayinka.

Now, let's talk business...

MOCHELLE FASHION SCHOOL SOCIAL MEDIA PERFORMANCE & BRAND ALIGNMENT REPORT

FACTS

Becoming great and building great things requires mastery within four key pillars;

- The Self,
- The Story,
- The Philosophy,
- The Team

Together, they are the pillars of greatness. Of these four pillars, having a successful business centralizes more on the story and the philosophy. Science, Psychology and History have shown that there is no graph, data or information that stands a greater chance of positively influencing humans than a truly great story. Philosophy, on the other hand is the set of beliefs, values and principles that guide all human behaviours - the fundamental beliefs that underpin your actions.

In business, the laws of storytelling is used to harness human to follow you, to buy from you, to believe you, to trust you, to click, to act, to listen, to understand, to comment and to illuminate you.

The business philosophy serves as the foundation of any successful establishment. It offers a clear direction and purpose. It is simply, the guiding framework for fostering a coherent company culture, enhancing customer relationships, and supporting strategic decision making.

Stories are the single most powerful weapon any leader can arm their self with; they are the currency of humanity. When the story aligns with the brand philosophy, the self, and the team effort are rewarded with greatness; an achievement of success.

In Nigeria, fashion is not just an industry, it's a vibrant cultural force that shapes identity, influences trends, and tells stories rooted in heritage and innovation. Hence, a social media manager for a fashion brand directly equates to a cultural antenna and brand translator.

The Nigerian fashion scene is dynamic and fiercely competitive. Designers are constantly pushing creative boundaries while striving to stand out in a crowded marketplace. This distinctly echoes the fact that in the fashion industry; Social media is not just marketing, it is performance.

Social media relates to a stage where fashion brands perform and connect. It's the platform where taste is showcased, where brands build their unique voices, where trends are set, and where fashion designers thrive on authenticity and creativity. It is an avenue that amplifies direct and personal engagement with audiences.

A social media manager is solely responsible for how the brand behaves in public, in real time. They manage perception, pace and brand personality. In fashion, silence, timing, tone, and restraint matter as much as posting. A social media manager must understand a brand's visual DNA, must be able to maintain consistency across captions, replies, stories and collaborations.

Fashion rewards taste, not volume. A Social media manager must track micro-trends, not viral noise, must influence how content is created upstream and must think like editors, stylists and cultural curators.

In conclusion, fashion brands don't lose relevance loudly, they lose it subtly. A social media manager must prioritize three key things by always thinking distinctly for contents distribution. These three things are factors that determine traffic generation and page productivity. They are: ATTENTION-CAPTURE, RETENTION, and RETURN.

ANALYSIS

Brand/Institution: MOCHELLE FASHION SCHOOL

Platform: Instagram, TikTok, Facebook.

Period Reviewed: last 30 days

Prepared by: De Kompany

This report evaluates the current primary social media pages' presence of MOCHELLE FASHION SCHOOL in relation to brand positioning, audience engagement, and institutional objectives. While the pages have successfully accumulated a large audience, the analysis shows that the accounts are not effectively converting attention into authority, engagement, or outcomes. There is a clear mismatch between audience size and audience value.

In its current state, these platforms represent unrealized leverage and pose a risk of long-term brand dilution if left unaddressed.

KEY FINDING (CORE DIAGNOSIS)

Social media pages have visibility, but lack strategic clarity. As a result, audience attention is high, but trust, engagement, and conversion are low.

EVALUATION STRUCTURE & FINDINGS

(Using the 5 Evaluation Pillars)

FIRST PILLAR: Strategic Positioning & Clarity

Observation

The accounts category, bio, and pinned contents do not clearly communicate what the institution stands for, who it is for, and what differentiates it from other fashion schools. As a result, the account creates ambiguity at first contact, making it difficult for new visitors to immediately understand whether the page represents a training institution, a personal brand, or a commercial fashion entity.

Impact

New visitors cannot immediately understand the school's value proposition. The page feels active but directionless.

Insight

A lack of clarity at the top of the page weakens every post that follows: The CEO must note that the school is the masterpiece; a fashion guru builds a brand while a fashion school CEO builds a future. When the two roles are confused, the school becomes fragile and when they are balanced, the school becomes an institution.

SECOND PILLAR: Content Quality & Brand Alignment

Observation

Content themes are inconsistent and reactive. Posts do not follow a defined content architecture (education, proof, outcomes, authority); Visual and messaging standards fluctuate significantly.

Impact

The page does not reinforce institutional authority, and high posting volume has not translated into meaningful engagement.

Insight

Posts volume has replaced content intention; content volume is high, but strategic alignment is low.

THIRD PILLAR: Audience Health & Engagement

Observation

Follower count is high; Engagement rate is disproportionately low relative to audience size; Comments are limited, shallow, or unrelated to the institution's mission; Saves and shares are minimal.

Impact

Indicates a passive or misaligned audience Suggests that attention has not been earned through relevance.

Insight

The audience exists but passive, and it is not activated; large following equals to and do not equals to effective audience.

FOURTH PILLAR: Interaction & Public Signal Management

Observation

Comment responses are inconsistent in tone and timing; some public interactions weaken perceived professionalism; No clear engagement strategy is evident, like who to respond to, when to respond and how to respond.

Impact

Public behaviour does not consistently reflect an educational institution; it mostly signals confusion rather than confidence; public interactions currently weaken brand perception.

Insight

Every reply is a public signal. Currently, those signals are unmanaged.

FIFTH PILLAR: Outcomes & Conversion

Observation

No clear evidence that the page is driving—applications, qualified inquiries and partnerships; Calls- to-action are weak or inconsistent.

Impact

Audience attention is not translating into institutional value. The page functions more as a broadcast channel than a conversion tool.

Insight

Attention without outcomes is cost, not value.

RISK ASSESSMENT

If current practices continue, the brand risks; gradual erosion of credibility, difficulty attracting high-quality students, reputational inconsistency between online presence and real-world standards, continued underperformance despite large reach.

OPPORTUNITY ASSESSMENT

The existing audience represents a significant strategic advantage if properly repositioned; with clearer positioning, disciplined content architecture, controlled public interaction, and outcome driven strategy. The page can be transformed into a credibility asset, a recruitment channel, a brand authority platform. All without additional audience growth spend.

STRATEGIC RECOMMENDATIONS

- Pause reactive posting to reset strategy and standards.
- Redefine positioning (category, bio, pinned content) to clarify institutional identity.

CONCLUSION

This evaluation is not a critique of effort, but of structure and alignment. The problem is not audience size. The problem is what the audience is being asked to believe; with focused leadership and strategic correction, this page can move from visibility to institutional influence.

DE KOMPANY VALUE PROPOSITION SHOWCASED

The first pillar of structure evaluation is Strategic Positioning and Clarity; it explains that brand bio, category and pinned posts don't perfectly communicate the Institutional Philosophy.
